

STYLE.COM

REVIEWS 2007 – THE YEAR IN FASHION

NEW YORK, December 11, 2007 – Style.com, the definitive online fashion destination, presents "The Year In Fashion," a compilation of the most memorable news stories of the past 12 months. In it, the editors look back at fashion moments both outrageous and sublime, with special emphasis on the outrageous. Here, 6 subjects that had everyone talking.

For the complete review of 2007, "The Year in Fashion," please visit www.style.com.

- Off the Wall – As Fendi's Karl Lagerfeld put it, "The Great Wall is built to be a runway, huh?" $10 million later, Communist China had its first Western fashion show on its greatest landmark.
- Hitting It Big – The Gossip's plus-size lead singer, Beth Ditto, makes friends with Kate Moss and becomes fashion's unlikeliest muse.
- Outrageous Fortune – Prices keep going up--$159,000 Balenciaga leggings, anyone?--but people keep buying.
- Diamonds Are a Boy's Best Friend – The art world isn't immune. Damien Hirst's life-size, gem-encrusted skull, For the Love of God, sells for a reported $122 million.
- The Surreal Life – From Miu Miu's teacup heel shoes to Marc Jacobs' "too-small" slip-on pumps, Spring '08 accessories take their cues from Salvador Dalí and co.
- The Empress' New Clothes – And now for something from the "what were they thinking" department: Spring '08's hottest trend, transparency.

About STYLE.COM

Launched in September 2000, Style.com has become the definitive online fashion destination. Combining gorgeous design with world-class editorial, the site offers comprehensive runway coverage of all the major fashion shows; lavish and authoritative reports on seasonal trends; the latest social, celebrity, and fashion news; beautifully packaged shopping guides; and lively, informed takes on the intersection between fashion and pop culture.